Pace Industries Supports Recycling Efforts

Reducing impact on the environment is a worthy cause that continues to make headlines. Many articles feature companies striving to reduce their carbon footprint. Pace Industries, like countless others, has honed in on efforts to improve environmental practices. What we have learned is that those who join forces find the task less daunting. One sizeable opportunity is to optimize a product's recyclability.

Many large users of Pace styrene are credited for their returned scrap. The scrap is scheduled to return on trucks delivering new Pace stock. Material is then reprocessed to create a less demanding product for utility applications. Customers involved in Pace's recycling program help to divert over 3,000,000 pounds from the wastestream annually.

For many years the packaging industry has incorporated a recycling code on most of their products. Encouraging graphic designers to design with recycling in mind increases the likelihood of a product being recycled. Recommendations include adding the appropriate recycling symbol, reducing adhesives, eliminating tape and grommets, and separating or avoiding mixing of plastic types. The following recycling codes can be used on Pace products:

- Recycling Codes are standardized symbols representing commonly used plastics. These recognized codes assist end users in making educated decisions that can in turn fit their individual communities recycling programs.
- Pace is listed as an EPA Green Power Partner for its use of renewable energy.
